The Manual Training School

The building erected upon the grounds of the White Public School for the use of the Manual Training class has been completed, and at certain hours every day each of the grades, from the highest down to the sixth, repair there to receive instruction from Prof. Robbins. The hours are so arranged that one grade follows another in succession so that the Professor has to be in the shop every hour during school time, excep three hours each week which he devotes to lectures and instruction to the smaller grades. Although this department has been established but one month. the scholars are becoming greatly interested and are showing marked improvement, especially in their drawing. Every Tuesday after noon, from 3 until 5, Prof. Robbins gives instructions to the entire corps of teachers. They are now engaged in learning perspective drawing, and in the future are expected to use the knowl edge thus received in instructing their grades. So far as it has been tried the manual training department has proven to be quite a success, and the trustees and patrons are highly gratified with Prof. Robbins is a genial gentleman and thoroughly qualified for the position to which he has been called.

Manual Training.

We have said that manual train we have said that manual training is the complement of the public schools. A complement is that which fills up, completes, supplies a deficiency.

The human being is three-sided, supplies a deficiency.

The human being is three-sided, has a tri partite nature and is therefore susceptible to triple cultivation. He is possessed of heart, head and hand, each of which demands cultivation. The cultivation of the heart should devolve chiefly upon the family and the church. The school should not fail to impart moral lessons whenever the opportunity offers. Its principal work, however, is to cultivate the head. In the past the public school has directed its efforts principally toward intellectual and moral training, almost entirely ignoring the training of the hand. To-day, in order to do justice to the triple nature of the child, the school provides hand training by introducing labor as an educational factor.

For all the wants of man nature provides raw material lavishly. In practical life mechanical ingenuity converts raw material into a nuty converts raw material into a product having greater value than it posessed in its crude form. In converting crude matter into some form which gives it increased value, the operator is compelled value, the operator is compelled to think, to observe, to deliberate, to reason and to conclude. In like manner the pupil of the manual training school, as soon as he begins to construct things, discovers that he must observe close begins to construct things, discovers that he must observe close ly, must be attentive, must form an ideal, must think out the process of construction carefully, must consider which is the best process or the proper material to be used in attaining his ideal, must use his reason in determining what effects certain causes produce or in discoving the cause of the error he has made. Here is a large field in which the pupil engages voluntarily as a gleaner, always gathering a sheaf, the consciousness of inherent power to do.

The universe is composed of two parts, the world of matter and the world of mind. These are interdependent, are complements of each other. Mind deprived of matter would be utterly helpless, matter without mind would be entirely useless. Manual training brings the mind of the prived of matter would be utterly helpless, matter without mind would be entirely useless. Manual training brings the mind of the pupil into direct contact with its complement, matter. In the even training brings the mind of the pupil into direct contact with its complement, matter. In the proper manipulation of matter it becomes a thing of worth or of beauty. The development of mind harmonizes with this development of matter. Mind is strengthened in the process and the pupil encouraged to attempt other and more difficult achievements. He gains a practical experience with things surrounding him. He wrestles with the forces of nature with which he becomes familiarized by overcoming or by calling to his assistance. In planing he overcomes the force of cohesion. In making a glued joint he calls upon the force of adhesion for assistance. In sawing he illustrates the divisibility of matter, and in driving a nail, impenetrability of matter. His tools are based upon mechanical or mathematical principles. His hammer is a lever, his chisel is a wedge. His square is a right angle and his level may be set to any angle. His dividers describe arcs and circles, divides a space into equal parts. He thus realizes the intimate relationship which exists between things and the ideas contained in his text books.

exists between things and the ideas contained in his text books.

The tendency of this wrestling with nature's forces is to incite a desire to scrutinize more closely the pages of the great book of nature as it lies spread out all around him. His observation is cultivated and he begin to see things as they are. The study of the phenomena of surrounding nature should lead the earnest student to a consideration of self, that almost incomprehensible comthat almost incomprehensible com bination of the spiritual and the October 25, 1893.

R. Tobin, Mayor, Frankfort, Ay.:

DEAR Sine—Your telegram of the 21st was received this morning. We are sorry our advices are not satisfactory, because we do not see that we can offer anything better. When we received your contract the mills were all shut down, and owing to the fearful depression in business they continued to be shut down and most of them are now. We had considerable difficulty in placing the material for your bridge. We finally placed it with a company who started up on purpose to make this order and another large orders that we had on our books, and possibly if they had not done so we should not have been able to procure the material at this time. The extraordinary depression in business has also made it very slow work for us to repair the damages by fire in our riveting department. We expected to be in our new shop by this time, but it is not completed, although we could. Of couse this makes the work go a great deal slower. It is, however, one of those things that no one could foresee. We have pushed it as hard as we could and it is impossible to do any more.

is, however, one of those things that no one could foresee. We have done the best we could and it is impossible to do any more. We have your work well under way in our other shops, where we have temporary riveting arrangements, and are pushing it fast as possible, but the time mentioned in our telegram is the very best we can do. We shall try to live up to it. According to our understanding, however, you are not really suffering on account of the bridge not being erected. Perhaps we misunderstand the matter, but this is what we have heard from our men. We trust this is so and that you will not be put to any great inconvenience. We are sorry militers should work thus, but we cannot see that we have the sorry militers should work thus, but we cannot see that we have also been sorry militers should work thus, but we cannot see that we

to set up that plea.

We do not know who "our men" are that furnished them their information as to whether the people are suffering for the bridge or not, but we would like to inform the aforesaid gentlemen that if we are not now we certain ly will be suffering by the failure of the company to comply with their contract so soon as the people have to trudge up and down the muddy river bank to the ferry.

It is plain to be seen that cold weather will find the bridge un-finished, and if we get the com-pleted structure as a Christmas gift we may consider ourselves fortunate. The city council will doubtless inform the company, when they demand the payment of their next estimate, that the iron must be on the ground and the work well under way before

THE SCHOOL BUILDING.

A Bad Job and in Miserable Repair.

Although the White Public School building has been built but a tew years, it is in a wretched condition. The roof leaks, there is hardly a ceiling in the building that is not ready to fall off, and in many places has already done so, the floors, closets and waincoting have pulled away from the walls, and there is not enough draft in the flue into which the pipe from the furnace runs to enable the engineer to get up steam enough to heat the building, and the consequence is that the rooms on the third floor cannot be made comfortable for the teachers and pupils in cold weather. If the fire in the furnace is stirred up soot pours out of the chimney in great chunks and the room over the boiler is constantly filled with such a peculiar odor that the teacher has to keep the windows lowered from the top all the time. The steam gauge upon the boiler should show a pressure of at least 25 or 30 pounds in extreme weather in order to heat the entire building, but the engineer, with hard work, cannot raise more than twelve pounds. Winter is coming on and the roof should be repaired and the heating apparatus, by all means, gotten into good work-ing order at once, even if the other repairs are not made, but the whole house is needing overhauling and thorough repairing badly, and the City Council or School Board should look after the matter.

Primaries Must Go.

A friend has sent us a copy of the South Florida Sentinel with the following article marked as expressive of his sentiments:

Primaries are schools of slander, malevolence and private harred, and the candidates voted for, whether named or left, engender animosities which are never for-what else is gained by this pernicious system? Echo answers —pernicious system! It is a marine fable to assert that the What else is gained by this pernicious system? Echo answers —pernicious system! It is a marine fable to assert that the country precincts have any better opportunity to secure candidates satisfactory to the yeomarry than by the old-fashioned delegate system.

In selecting delegates two or three of the largest precincts can, and often do, combine against the smaller ones and thus take not smaller ones and thus take not only the cake but the bakery also. Primaries drive out good men who would offer themselves as candidates, but for the onerous cost it entails. In the first round, candidates cannot assail the opponent's politics, but are driven to the subterfuge of attacking private character. A second canvass becomes necessary to discuss political matters, making it too expensive for men who would fill the offices as well, if not better, than those who can afford the outlay.

Going to China.

Mr. George B. Hunt, who has been a clerk in the Farmers Bank in this city for several years, will leave on the 15th of next month for Hong Kong, China, where he has accepted the position of private secretary to his father, Capt. William C. Hunt, of Greenville, Mississippi, who has been appointed U. S. Consul at that port.

Mr. Waller Bullock, of Lexington, will succeed Mr. Hunt as clerk in the bank.

THE WORLD'S FAIR.

Estimated Sum of Money This County and State has Poured Into Chicago.

Ex-Governor Knott's Prophecy.

The proprietor of one hotel, the University, on Congress street in Chicago, says that he has entertained over 700 people from this city since the opening of the World's Fair. There is no doubt that more Frankfort people stopped at the University than at any other hotel in Chicago, but it is reasonable to suppose that twice as many visitors were quartered in other hotels and private houses. Estimating that 2,000 people from this city and county have attended the Fair, and which it is believed is not far from the actual number, and fixing an average of $40 for each person, the total amount of money that has been lost to this city and county alone will aggregate $80,000. It has been stated that no less than 200,000 Kentuckians have visited the Fair, and if this be true, the loss in dollars to the whole State at the same ratio has been $8,000,000. benefits to the visitors in an educational point of view are un-quesotined, but the following excerpts from ex-Gov. Knott's argnment before the Court of Appeals on the constitutionality of the $100,000 appropriation are, nevertheless, food, for reflection in these

VETERAN LAYS DOWN HIS ARMS.

Death of Gen. Thos. L. Critten-den, Hero of Two Wars.

The intelligence was received here Monday of the death of General Thomas I.eonidas Crittenden, which sad event occurred at his home on Staten Island, New York, that morning, from the effects of a second paralytic

The deceased was born at Rus sellville, Logan county, in 1819, and came to this city with his father, the late Hon. John J. Crittenden, when quite young. The greater portion of his education was received un-der the instruction of the late Prof. Kean O'Hara, and after leaving that school he studied law with his father and commenced the practice of his profession here. When the Mexican War broke out he voluntéered and served with great distinction, rising to the rank of Lieutenant-Colonel. At the battle of Buena Vista he was serving as an aid upon the staff of General Zachary Taylor, and during a lull in the battle was sent with a flag of truce through Hill during the funeral services. the Mexican lines. When presented before General Santa Anna that officer demanded to know if General Taylor had surrendered and General Crittenden's answer:

"General Taylor never surren-ders," made him famous in history. After General Taylor was elect-President he appointed Gen. Crittenden Consul to Liverpool and when his term as such expired he returned to Louisville and entered into business.

In -1861 he was appointed Inspector General of the State to acceed Gen. S. B. Buckner, who had resigned to enter the Confed erate Army; was shortly after commissioned as Brigadier General in the volunteer service of the United States and was promoted to the rank of Major General for gallant conduct upon the battle field at Shiloh. He served under both Generals Buell and Rosencranz and had command first of a division and then of a corps, par ticipating in all the campaigns of the Army of the Tennessee up to and including Chicamauga. He resigned his commission December 13th, 1864.

At the close of the war he re-turned to this city to reside and was appointed by Gov. Bramlett to fill out the unexpired term of Col. James H. Garrard, deceased, Colonel in the Regular Army and assigned to the command of the 32d U. S. Infantry, July 28, 1866, bnt was transferred May 19, 1869, to the 17th U. S. Infantry, which position he held until he retired, May 19th, 1881, at his own request. He was brevetted Brigadier General in the U. S. Army, March 2d, 1867, for gallant and meritorious conduct in the battle of Stone River, Tennessee. Upon retiring he took up his residence upon Governor's Island, New York, later moved to New York City, and about a year ago bought a home upon Staten Island, where he died.

He leaves a wife, formerly Mis-Kittie Todd, sister of the late Capt, H. I. Todd-his only child, Lieutenant John Jordan Critten-den, was killed at the Custar massacre in 1877-a brother, Col. Robert H. Crittenden, of this city, and numerous relatives here and in other parts of the State to mourn his loss.

The remains arrived here Wednesday evening and the funeral took place Thursday morning at 11 o'clock from the First Presbyterian Church. A large number of friends and relatives attended and a salute was fired from Arsenal

SEATTLE, WASHINGTON, October 11th, 1893.
M. Woodson, Esq., Frankfort,

Ky.:

DBAR SIR—I saw the party who owns the 40 acres near Seattle that I spoke to you about. He promised to write you in regard to it. I went out to the state of gard to it. I went out to see some fruit grown within two miles of the place I mentioned to you. To give you an idea of the quantity grown on trees which were quite small, I will tell you the number of pounds plucked from one tree of yellow plums. The owner had taken, when I was there, over 400 pounds, and I thought that the amount left on the tree was a big crop. I saw prune trees that were actually breaking down under their loads of fruit. As to apples I do not think I ever saw finer in color or shape. — I saw one blackberry bush or vine that had 20 gallons taken off and has as many more. Strawberries are in the narket, grown here, and sell at 12½ cents a box. When I began to look into the Iruit raising I was astonished to see the amount and quality that could be raised from such small trees. The place I spoke to you about is better adapted to raising the fruits spoken of than the place where I saw the trees in bearing. Hoping the above may be of some benefit to you.

I am yours truly,

Jas. W. Nicol.

ZEB.

The funniest of all domestic comedies is "Zeb." that is to be presented at the Opera House October 30th, and if all promises are verified it will be a fitting attraction for theatre-goers of Frankfort to turn out en masse. "Zeb" is a new comedy, and en tirely original in every particular. The scenes are laid within a short idistance of Muncie, Indiana, and every character in the piece has an original in the territory men, tioned. The scenery, both interiors and exteriors, has been painted from mo els near Muncie. In fact, the good people near by will be given a boom. Mr. Young, the author of "Zeb." has written a very pretty story a little dramatic in places, but largely given over to comedy. He lived near Muncie for the purpose of becoming acquainted with their little peculiarities. He also made a study of the characters which he has drawn for the stage. Among other sensible things that "Zeb" does is to visit Chicago, where he becomes a shining mark for Clark street. visit Chicago, where he becomes a shining mark for Clark street

Incidental to the play there will be presented a number of excel-lent musical and dancing features and the celebrated "Zeb" Quar-tette. The mechanical and scenic effects introduced in "Zeb" are new and original—in one act alone is introduced 16 280 feet of scenery representing "Zeb" at the World's Fair riding on the mova-ble sidewalk.
